

How to complain about an Insolvency Practitioner

Who can complain about an insolvency practitioner?

If you are a debtor, a creditor, or an employee, director or shareholder of an insolvent company and are dissatisfied in relation to the professional work of an insolvency practitioner or their staff you are entitled to make a complaint. An insolvency practitioner may act as or be known as:

- a trustee in bankruptcy
- an administrator of a deceased insolvent estate
- a liquidator if a company is to be wound up and its assets sold
- a provisional liquidator
- an administrator
- an administrative receiver
- a nominee or supervisor of a voluntary arrangement
- a trustee of a partnership

Step 1

Contact your Insolvency Practitioner directly.

If you're not happy with the activities of the Insolvency Practitioner or a member of their staff you can make a formal complaint to them. You can make your complaint by phone or in writing. The contact details are as follows:

5. The Insolvency Practitioner will keep you aware of the steps that are being taken to investigate your complaint and if for any reason it will take longer than 8 weeks to respond you will be informed of the reasons for this and will be given a revised time estimate;
6. If the Insolvency Practitioner concludes that a complaint is unjustified then they will provide you with (in writing) a full and clear explanation of the reasons for that conclusion. In appropriate circumstances you will be referred to the matters affecting the duties of the Insolvency Practitioner, including the relevant legislation;

Further information about the Complaints Gateway

What is the Complaints Gateway and who does it cover?

The Complaints Gateway is run by the Insolvency Service and is the single entry point system for complaints about Insolvency Practitioners. The Gateway covers all complaints against insolvency practitioners across the full range of insolvency procedures.

What complaints are not covered by the Gateway?

The Gateway cannot reverse or alter a decision of an insolvency practitioner nor can it intervene in matters of a commercial or legal nature. Only the courts can rule on these matters. If you are dissatisfied with a court order such as a bankruptcy or a winding-up order against your company, you should seek independent legal advice. You should be aware that there are statutory time limits for appealing against orders or findings of the court.

Can you complain about an insolvency practitioner's expenses or fees?

Yes you can. The Gateway will deal with complaints about an insolvency practitioner's fees and expenses, but only if they are guilty of unprofessional, improper or unethical actions such as:

- misconduct by failing to seek authorisation for the fees or
- charging fees that unfair or unreasonable.

If there is no misconduct involved, the level of remuneration an insolvency practitioner receives is a commercial matter and cannot be considered by the Insolvency Service's Complaints Gateway.
